ASD Reading is a groundbreaking online reading & writing program for children with Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD).

“ASD Reading is a daily necessity in my special education classroom. The program is incredibly effective and enables students to learn the full range of reading skills. Thank you!” -- Jay Cowan, teacher

“Dr. Blank has created a monumental work that makes available to educators her simple, straightforward and time-tested approach.” -- Dr. Jeffrey Lieberman, Columbia University

“ASD Reading is a tour-de-force. Dr. Blank’s unique and innovative system is enormously useful to parents and teachers.” -- Dr. Susan A. Rose, Albert Einstein College Of Medicine

Dr. Marion Blank is a world-renowned developmental psychologist and literacy expert who developed and served as Co-Director of the Columbia University Developmental Neuropsychiatry Program for Autism and Related Disorders. She has authored scores of peer-reviewed articles and books, lectured extensively around the world and developed dozens of award winning teaching programs. Dr. Blank is also a recipient of the Upton Sinclair Award which honors individuals who have made a significant contribution to education.

ASD Reading offers unique instruction methods not found in other programs:

- It requires no prerequisite skills - all children can use the program - even those who are non-verbal.
- It uses graphics, audio and animation extensively to reinforce meaning.
- It links written and spoken language so that one mirrors and reinforces the other.
- It provides customized instruction that adapts to each child’s specific skills and needs.
- It systematically assesses a child’s skills and overcomes error patterns and difficulties.
